

Our Commitment to Mission With Integrity

At God Said Go, integrity means living out what we believe. It's not just about words—it's about actions that reflect the heart of the Gospel in everything we do. Our mission is holistic: we proclaim the Good News of Jesus and demonstrate it through love, justice, and service.

When we talk about "mission with integrity," we mean that transformation must involve both evangelism and compassionate action. These are not separate tracks—they are intertwined. Our words must be backed by lives that model love and repentance, and our service must reflect the grace and truth of Jesus Christ.

At the center of it all is Jesus. His life of sacrificial love is our example for discipleship. On the cross, Jesus identified with the poor, the oppressed, and the innocent—those the world has too often cast aside. Through His death, God revealed how seriously He takes justice and reconciliation, bringing both oppressors and the oppressed into restored relationship with Himself.

We serve not in our own strength, but in the power of the risen Christ through the Holy Spirit. Together, we walk alongside the poor and the hurting, holding on to hope in the promise that Jesus will one day make all things new.

We believe the local church is God's chosen instrument for mission with integrity. When the church reflects the love, compassion, and justice of Jesus, it becomes a transforming presence in its community. That's why we're committed to equipping and planting churches that live out the Gospel—places where the poor are welcomed, the marginalized are seen, and reconciliation becomes real.

The church is not just a building or an institution—it's a living, breathing community of Jesus-followers who embody the values of the Kingdom of God. And when believers live out those values together, the world takes notice.

Mission with integrity also means respecting the dignity and voice of the poor. We do not coerce, manipulate, or pressure anyone to believe what we believe. Instead, we build relationships, walk in humility, and point people to Jesus through our actions. We trust that God will open hearts as we live faithfully.

We recognize that true transformation requires partnership. That's why we work with churches, community leaders, civil society, local governments, and businesses—each bringing something unique to the table. We know we need each other to confront poverty, injustice, and systemic brokenness.

In a world marked by division, we are called to be peacemakers. We will speak up for those who cannot speak for themselves and stand for justice in a world that too often values wealth over humanity. We will challenge injustice, advocate for the vulnerable, and use our voice and resources to lift up those crushed by corruption and inequality.

This is what mission with integrity looks like: faithful, humble, Spirit-led service that proclaims the love of Christ in word and deed. We're committed to walking this path together—loving deeply, serving boldly, and always pointing back to Jesus.
